Logging in to get the full text of journal articles, e-books and other research off campus

If you are off campus before starting your search (even if you want to use Google) login from the turquoise Sign in button below our contact details on the Library home page:

http://www.harper-adams.ac.uk/university-life/library/

Doing this drops a cookie on your device so that publishers will think that you are using a Harper machine and will allow you access to the research we have bought for you.

In this way you should only have to login once even if you use research from many different publishers.
